A push-chair consists of two delta-shaped side frames and connected by cross bars ~~such as~~ with a seat attached between the side frames, and with wheels at the bottom ends of the side frame bars. A transverse platform is provided at its lower rear, with the rear wheels mounted substantially at the trailing edge of the platform. The seat is forward of the platform, so that a second child can be carried on the platform, in a standing position behind the seat. Alternatively, a shopping bag can be carried vertically on the platform.
